I have a cottage at the lake that I use solar and wind generated energy. It was quite expensive to install but over the long term it pays for itself because I don't have an energy bill.

You'll be able to contact someone in your area to discuss your energy needs and what you would need to install and how much it would be.

Well I have to agree that cost of installation is high but it will be turn into profit in future because we don't have an energy bills.

My area counted as world's best place for Wind Energy because good and constant wind here. So should I try wind energy or stick with Solar energy.

This is something I'd like to look into for myself, as well. The power bills always seem to be going up and the power company keeps raising rates and it gets harder and harder to keep the bills paid.

Well this is a common problem for everyone and bills going higher and higher with raising rates and now times to think about new ways like this to save money and power.

To be honest, I have thought about using solar power, especially after last winter when my power company screwed me royally. The problem is I don't have the money to install solar power. I realize it's a great way to save a lot of money, but you have to have the money first. Kind of a Catch-22.
