

---

Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by harimadsol - 2007/07/12 01:33

---

I'm one of those people who likes cars with a certain amount of power. I always drive a six cylinder car, because I like to know that it will move quickly when I want it to. Has anyone had experience with the engine power of hybrid cars?

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by reiki2 - 2007/07/12 09:42

---

Hi

It seems that the Honda Accord Hybrid has more power than its conventional counterpart.

0-to-60-mph acceleration times...

Honda Accord Hybrid = 6.6 (auto)

Honda Accord = 5.9 (manual), 6.5 (auto)

These comparisons seem to similar with other manufactures

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Rohitpatel - 2007/07/14 15:51

---

Well thanks for provide the numbers and glad to know about this comparisons between Hybrid and regular car. I would go for Hybrid cars whenever I will buy new car.

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by QuietLunatic - 2007/07/21 00:18

---

The older hybrids were notorious for not having power, but it seems the new generation are just as powerful and better on fuel than their gasoline counterparts. I'll give serious consideration to a hybrid for my next vehicle.

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Rohitpatel - 2007/07/21 15:42

---

Well in India, our goverment encourage us to use hybrid cars and vehicles and give some good discounts on the cost.

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Cymru Am Byth - 2007/07/27 23:05

---

Hybrid cars sound like a great idea but until the goverments start to give some form of tax break to hybrid users they are gong to struggle to make an impact on the market!

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Angela - 2007/07/28 00:27

---

---

I agree that the uk gov needs to make a tax break for hybrid cars.

OOH a tax break on cars, it will break their hearts:P

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Rohitpatel - 2007/08/02 17:17

---

Well atleast in India we are happy that our government are provider better tax method for this and cut down the price upto 30%. But in India this is still new format of car so we have to wait next 2 to 3 years to take best advantage.

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by reiki2 - 2007/08/02 21:30

---

Car tax

"Car manufacturers are worried that lack of awareness is putting car buyers off hybrids, because they're seen as difficult to fill up, drive and maintain - and expensive to buy," said the BBC's Tom Symonds.

He went on: "It is hoped cuts to car tax announced by the chancellor last week will help, though a system of grants to encourage more people to buy hybrid vehicles has been delayed."

To read the full article click the link below....

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/uk/4852448.stm>

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Rohitpatel - 2007/08/03 17:34

---

Well that was very imporatant news for us and good story line. Thanks for posting it. I think they should think about this.

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Archbob - 2007/09/28 11:31

---

I don't think they have to be. They may not have as much acceleration as their counterparts, but unless your racing or something, who really needs that? Hybrids can still run partly on gas so I don't quite see where the performance has to suffer.

=====

Re:Are hybrid cars \"gutless\"?

Posted by Johnson486 - 2012/05/10 22:38

---

I am checking many forums from since morning in search of unique information i have got some of my related info on your forum its really good.

=====